THE LOBSTER QUESTION.

The lobster, like meat, is at reasonable cost at its source and unreacry. The lobstermen are not piling up wealth with lobsters selling at 30 ents a pound; and the ples of scarcit does not answer the question wha nakes the difference in price at the two points of delivery. The lobster appellte at the shore resorts has been arged with being the cause, and with September and the incoming of ovsters the jobster will doubtless full to his nemal price on the weekly market ta-

It is cheering to note that the finh commissions of Maine has planted 148,000,000 lobsters along the Mujne coast which ought to be ready for shipment this season. Other state fist commissioners along the Atlantic seapard should be contributing their illions in the interests of the public

An eastern paper says: "A very mall proportion of the people who ove this crustaceun will enloy salads this autumn at reduced rates. relatently is the enormous difference between the price the lobstor entchers and that the lobster sellers receive aintained that the suspicion is rif that a huge jobster trust is secret If the auspicion is coperating it the suspicion is connediately get busy. The protection of lobater is the salvation of the losophy is not equal to the coemporaneous increase of the lobster supply and the maintenance of almost prehibitive prices."

A LIMIT TO CRITICISM.

The greatest admirers of Colone sevelt recognize that he does no opear to take cognizance of the fact that there is a limit to interference that friction is expensive when or occusarily intense. It is not surpris ing that he assailed the supreme cour the United States, but no good en come of queering before the people the highest tribunal of justice in this country. As one writer well says: "The reme court has survived many at seks and will survive many more. . imbedded so strongly in our conititution that only a constitutiona revolution can take it out. The fa-thers builded wisely and well when they rendered the court immovable by guess of agitation. It was not the intention of the framers of the constitution that this should be a demoracy of parsion and prejudice, but a their purpose they devised no more effective agency than the suprem court. If refermers, state or national attack the wrong end of a proble stitutional, it is wiser for them to hee the warnings of that tribonal and the next time to begin their proceedings in the way it indicates in right."

Pilgrim Cause and Effect.

The Pilgrims did not come here to enrich themselves, to enlarge the dominion of a royal lord and master, to subjugate the Indian and the wilderess with ruthlessness and violence in he satisfaction of the last of predom-nance and power. They came here to found a commonwealth, with the Bible as the cornerstone of what firm foundation might be established. They buildtion might be established. They builded better than they knew. We have

But if we have modified some of their theological notions, we have not found ourselves able profitably to disfound ourselves able profitably to dis-pense with the finer qualities of the purer Puritan character. We cannot do without their inexorable sense of ference there is in the strict of God between the best of us and the most hardened critical. If we are able to realize the localest ideals as a nation or as individuals, we cannot far de part from the established ways of the forefathers; we must conserve Puritan traditions.—Philadelphia Pub-
